Even some of the folks who keep up with all the latest radio and newspaper news and mark lines of military strategy on tablecloths get a little behind on their Bond buying now and then. They are getting used to War Bond booths by now and that first fever of Bond buying that came after Pearl Harbor is running a little low.

They can read a list of casualties or men captured by the Japs and Germans without that impending urge to do something! Yet each time it's a different boy and a different mother to suffer heartaches. So, let's not fall down on the job. Come in and buy not only your pledged 10 percent, but dig down deep and buy an extra War Bond this week.

Offensive FORMATIONS

"T" FORMATION

DOUBLE WINGBACK

SINGLE WINGBACK

SHORT PUNT

—ROBERT J. LEE—

An offensive system or style of play to a football coach is merely the method by which he believes he can get more touchdowns than the teams he plays against.

Each of the country's coaches uses some set of offensive formations. In most every instance these are variations of the style of play set up by one of the early and more ingenious teachers of football, such as Knute Rockne, Pop Warner and Amos Alonzo Stagg.

The "T" formation is based mainly on speed. The quarterback is the key man in the "T". He handles the ball on every play—taking it right out of the center's hands, and then moving back into action. He can hand the ball to either halfback, or slip it to a pile-driving fullback for a crash into the line. Or he can hang onto the ball and slip back for a forward pass. For special trickery he can elect to keep the ball and try to sneak over center or off tackle to pick up a few yards.

Most of the nation's famed "power" teams are proponents of what is termed the "Single Wingback" formation—so called because one back lines up outside of his own end.

As can be seen by the diagram, quick-breaking plays around the strong end or off the strong tackle could have as much as four men acting as interference. Plays to the weak side require more speed and can be broken up by a strong end or tackle. Many is the time you've heard an announcer mention a "single wingback to the right" or a "single wingback to the left"—all of which only serves to indicate on which side of the center the power is lining up.

A double wingback is formed when two halfbacks line up outside of each end. In such a formation, in which the backfield is so spread out, you will find reverses and double reverses more common. The tailback (man who receives the ball from center) may slip the pigskin to either halfback on a reverse. Or he may give it to one half who then hands it to the other half going in the opposite direction, thereby making up the double reverse.

The formation most generally used on third or fourth-down kicks is shown here as the "short punt" formation. Both ends are lined up two or three yards from the tackles—to permit them to sprint down the field to cover the punt.

The third back lines up in front of the kicker. If the kicker is rightfooted, the blocker is on the right of the center; if the kicker is left-footed, the blocker lines up to the left of center. Only difference between short and long punt formation is the distance the kicker is from center. In regular punt formation, he lines up a full 10 yards back. The short punt is also used as a basic formation from which to pass or run by some coaches.

Offside and violation of kickoff formation. (Penalty, 5 yards.)

Unsportsmanlike conduct. (Penalty—15 yards.) For flagrant unsportsmanlike conduct—15 yard penalty and disqualification.

Illegal formation or position of one or more players. (Penalty—5 yards from where ball was put in play.)

Player illegally in motion. (Penalty, 5 yards. If from shift or huddle, 15 yards.)

Unnecessary roughness, illegal defensive use of the hands. (Penalty, 15 yards.)

Military salute also used for clipping, followed by striking the back of the knee with hand. (Penalty, 15 yards.) Signal also used for disqualification fouls and for running into or roughing the kicker. In the latter case, the military salute is followed by swinging the leg as though punting.

Holding. (Penalty—by offense, 15 yards; by defense, 5 yards.)

Score—touchdown, field goal, or conversion.

Intentional grounding of forward pass. (Penalty—loss of down and 15 yard penalty from spot of preceding down.)

Crawling, pushing, or helping ball-carrier. (Penalty for helping ball-carrier, 15 yards; otherwise, 5 yards.)

Delay of game or extra time-out. (Penalty, 5 yards.)

Safety.

Illegal touching of kicked ball inside opponent's 10-yard line—touchback.

Illegal forward pass.

Interference with forward pass, pass touching ineligible player, or "screening" pass receiver. (If penalty on offense, 15 yards and loss of down; interference by defense, ball to offense on spot of foul as first down.)

Penalty for use of incomplete pass, missed field goal or conversion, both sides offside, etc.

Time out.

PAID IN FULL

Newell Dwight Hillis, famous preacher, once made use of the services of a young physician who was not an ardent churchgoer. But the doctor never sent a bill.

"Look here, doctor," Hillis said finally, "I have to know how much I owe you."

After thinking it over, the doctor said, "I'll tell you, Hillis. I hear you're a pretty fair preacher and you seem to think I'm a pretty good doctor. I'll make a bargain with you. I'll do all I can to keep you out of heaven if you'll do all you can to keep me out of hell, and it won't cost either of us a cent. Is it a go?"

Why Eleven Men On a Side?

The Wall Game originated in 1845 at Eaton, one of England's secondary schools. This game was played with eleven men on a side, and the American game of football is indebted to Eaton for the principal of limiting the number of players on the team to eleven. The ball was put in play by a scrimmage against a wall. The object of the Wall Game was to secure a "fair shy" or, in other words, a free kick at goal.

Out of the Wall Game grew the Field Game played with two teams, still eleven men each, on a field 150 yards long and 100 yards wide, with goals marked with upright posts connected with a cross bar.

In 1873 a team of Etonians came to America to play a field game with Yale at New Haven. Yale won the contest which was played under a mixture of Eaton and Yale rules, one of which called for eleven players on a side. Yale having previously played with a 15 man team, was impressed with the possibilities of the game as played with eleven men on a side, and from that day on showed a preference for an eleven man team. In 1880, through the persistence of Yale's Walter Camp, the rules for the American football were changed, calling for an eleven man team rather than one of 15. This rule has never been altered.
