Want to make $100,000? Go back to school next month

WITH a high school education you can earn $247,000 in your working life — $104,000 more than the man or woman without high school. That is $26,000 more per year for the four years you will spend in high school — the most profitable investment you can ever make.

And if you go farther — if you go on through college as anyone can these days who truly wants to — you will almost double those earnings to nearly one half million dollars, and multiply the satisfaction you will get out of life a hundredfold.

We, the New Philadelphia High School Football Coaching Staff, think the best deeds a boy can do in high school are first, to get a fine education and second, play football for the "Quakers".

Last year in the United States, 826,000 boys played football in our High Schools. In New Philadelphia this year we have 58 players on the Varsity and Reserve team. The 9th and 8th grade football teams have 52 and 50 players respectively. Football is a growing participant sport and is the only sport left in the high school that retains body contact.

We would like to give you, the fan, the player and parents a little of our "philosophy" of coaching. We will preface our remarks into three categories:

1. Some beliefs and assumptions we have about the game.
2. The game itself.
3. Our relationship with the people who play for us.

We think that a coach is a teacher, not a strategist. We spend our time trying to teach a boy how to tackle, how to block, and how to move. We believe that coaching is just one thing... "It is creating in practice the situation that the player will face in the game and then repeating it until he can react by rote memory."

We believe that football is basically a morale game. It is played with the heart and the mind and then secondarily with the body. Morale is something that is subconscious and evolves from everything about the situation. If a football team has morale, it can win or at least will play as well as it can play. If a team lacks morale, its members can't possibly reach their potential.

The next basic belief about football is that the coaching staff ought to have a directed work effort. We mean that there are only 24 hours in the day and we have only so much energy, and the available time should be spent doing things that will better or improve our football. Don't waste time on unnecessary things.

The last general assumption is We Believe you have to THINK POSITIVELY. The team must feel we have the best offense, defense, kick off return, passing game etc. If it has any doubts, the percentage of opportunity is reduced.

Moving into the game itself, we have the following strong feelings. First, as far as the game is concerned, performance is the only thing that matters. Potential makes no difference. What a boy might do has no bearing on what he actually does, and we observe them enough in practice so that there is no use kidding ourselves when the game starts about what they "could do".

Secondly, football is a game of movement. Whoever said "get there fastest with the mostest" must have been talking about football. Good football teams cannot sacrifice quickness or speed.

The next point is this, consistency is what we are looking for. The team that wins football games is the team that makes the fewest number of bad plays. The best player is the boy that makes the fewest bad individual plays.

As far as coaching goes, we believe that we ought to teach fundamentals. We could have theoretically the best offense, defense, etc. but how well they operate is how well we execute the fundamentals. How well do you move? How well do you tackle? How well do you block? We think the coaching energies should be devoted to this area in high school.

When you evaluate the importance of the major factors in a game, we feel that football is first defense, second kicking and third offense, If the other team doesn't score, the Quakers cannot lose a football game. Defense takes natural ability and is difficult to teach. Offense, we feel, can be taught, if the player has the desire to put his "nose" in there and block--Because the initiative belongs to the offense.

We feel we have to practice everything. We will never improvise anything. If we have practiced it, maybe we can do it. If we haven't practiced it, we have no chance to execute it. We have a game plan and an alternative worked out in advance. We must even practice the "safety play".

We believe that any season of football is actually two seasons. There is a work season and a play season. From the start of practice in August until the first game, football is work. We must find out who will "pay the price" and "try to get the best" football player ready to play. We think that a team should be well rested and mentally ready to play the game, not from a standpoint of pep talks, but from the desire to actually get out and have some fun playing the game.

We want our relations with our players to be all right. We as coaches must assume a boy plays football because he enjoys it. Our job as coaches no matter how good or how bad a player may be, is to try to help him play the game a little bit better. We must get the best boys into the game. We think of a boy first of all as a football player not as a tackle or a guard or quarterback. His actual ability on the field is the determiner of whether he plays or not, not his potential ability.

We believe there is no compromise with loyalty. A boy who is not loyal to the team and coaches has no place on the football field. Every boy who is out for football is there to see how much he can contribute to the organization. When we have this attitude, we start to have a football team.

We would like to insist on the best effort all the time. If the players are physically tired where they can't make their best effort, you can't practice.

We think basically, that training rules come from within. We think the question is how good does the boy want to be?

We would like to be totally consistent in our attitude. This is the hardest thing for us to do. Some days we feel better than others. Some days we are irritated; other days we are happy; but in contact with the players, if possible, we hope to remain 100% the same all of the time so they can count on us. We would like to achieve the same consistency that parents have for their sons. He can count on his parents all the time, if they are doing their job. If we can achieve that consistency of attitude, it helps us. We use scrimmage movies to determine which boy is better. No one wants to admit the other boy is better than he.

We know the coaches have to work harder than the players so that they know that we are part of the organization. We hope to make a greater effort than we ask them to make during practice and during the game so that their effort will rise to our effort. We don't want to ask them to do something that we would not be willing to do and still be honest with them.

The whole answer to our relationship with our players is simply this: How would we want our son to be coached if we had a son. If the boy is wrong, we are going to tell him he is wrong in no uncertain terms. If it is necessary to discipline him, we are going to discipline. If he does well, we are going to tell him he has done well, and that is about the size of it.

AFTER TODAYS PRACTICE YOU ARE EITHER A BETTER FOOTBALL PLAYER OR YOU ARE WORSE...NEVER THE SAME!

Good Luck,
Coach Behling
